William Moffett is a highly regarded barrister, who is recognised for his expertise in private client, real estate, charities and business disputes. He also acts in professional negligence claims in those areas. He is frequently instructed in High Court litigation and on appeals, often in critical, high-value cases. He is recommended by Chambers UK Bar and The Legal 500 UK Bar, where he is frequently praised for his clarity, thoughtfulness and outstanding advocacy skills. He is also noted for the quality of his advisory practice.

PRIVATE CLIENT

William has extensive experience of working with private clients and their advisors to resolve complex disputes.

William is highly regarded for wills and estates work. He represents both claimants and defendants in contested probate claims and claims for family provision under the Inheritance (Provision for Family and Dependants) Act 1975. He regularly acts for personal representatives and beneficiaries, including well-known charities, faced with challenges to wills said to be invalid by reason of want of capacity, want of knowledge and approval or undue influence.

He has considerable experience in the analysis of medical evidence concerning mental capacity of testators, donors and settlors – especially in cases concerning the capacity of elderly persons – and has acted in ‘welfare’ and ‘property and affairs’ applications, statutory wills and lifetime gifts, and with particular experience of actions for the removal of deputies and costs applications in the Court of Protection.

William also has expertise in disputes concerning the construction of wills, the conflict of laws in relation to testamentary succession, and the law relating to the administration of estates.

He has experience in litigation and advisory work in all aspects of the law relating to trusts including their construction, identification of the proper objects and beneficiaries of trusts, rectification, exercise by the trustees of their powers and actions for breach of trust as well as recovery of trust property in the hands of fiduciaries and third parties.

He has also advised upon, and represented parties to, applications for the variation of trusts under the Variation of Trusts Act 1958.

William has particular expertise in trusts of land, common intention constructive trusts as well as constructive and resulting trusts in a commercial context.

Examples of significant cases include:

- Dryden v Young & Ors [2024] EWHC 1095 (Ch), W.T.L.R 843 (a case concerning the interpretation of a poorly-drafted will – William acted for an animal welfare charity successfully establishing its entitlement to a gift, the court considering the approach to identification of intended beneficiaries and the potential means of saving such gifts where charity beneficiaries were variously incorrectly named, or had ceased to exist, or had ceased to exist but their work continued through another charity)
- Savage v Savage [2024] EWCA Civ 49, 1 W.L.R. 3786, 2 F.C.R 200, 1 P.&C.R. 4, W.T.L.R 725 (a case concerning the proper interpretation of s.15(3) of the Trusts of Land and Appointment of Trustees Act 1996 and deciding that the court can give weight to minority wishes and circumstances – William acted for the successful appellant, a minority owner in a co-owned family farm, securing a right of pre-emption where the majority owner sought an order for sale)
- Guest v Guest [2023] 3 W.L.R. 911, 1 All E.R. 695, 1 F.L.R. 590, 2 P & CR 6, W.T.L.R. 431 (William acted, with Tom Dumont KC, for the farming couple who successfully appealed to the Supreme Court in this landmark decision in the law of proprietary estoppel which decided the correct approach to relief in such cases and the need to do justice to both claimants and defendants where an estoppel arises)
- Lewis v Tamplin [2018] W.T.L.R. 215 (acting for the successful claimants seeking information about a family trust – the decision provides important guidance on the nature and scope of the duty to provide trust information to beneficiaries, and the application of Schmidt v Rosewood in relation to different types of trustee decision-making)
- Vallée v Birchwood [2014] Ch 271, 2 W.L.R. 543 (a case concerning the law of donatio mortis causa)
- Green v Eadie [2012] Ch 363, 2 W.L.R. 510 (William represented the children of the bigamous marriage of the Duke of Manchester, establishing their entitlement to benefit from a family trust which had been said to exclude them on the basis of illegitimacy – the case decided the proper approach to the conflict of laws on questions of legitimacy where parents have different domiciles).

William is experienced in all aspects of commercial and residential property including: ownership and rights over land, restrictive covenants, easements, nuisance, adverse possession, boundaries, mortgages, overage agreements, leases, service charges, and wrongful interference with land.

CHARITIES

William has expertise in advising trustees as to the identification of charitable trusts, their purposes, public benefit, construction and the exercise of powers under them.

William has particular experience in advising trustees of trusts of land with a public or charitable element, especially sports and recreational venues, civic buildings and open spaces. In doing so William advises upon matters including the exercise of powers to sell or lease, the application of the doctrine of cy-près, the duties of trustees and the role of the Charity Commission.

William frequently acts for charities as beneficiaries under wills and trusts in all matters arising in respect of their beneficial interests and any challenges to them.

Examples of recent work in this area include:

- Advising local authorities on trusts governing civic buildings and land including pleasure gardens, clinics and community care institutions, concert halls and libraries
- Advising a local authority on the use of land left on trust for recreational purposes, comprising in part a well-known sports stadium used by a high-profile national sports club, on issues such as the right of the club to charge admission to the public
- Advising a nationwide benevolent institution on its funding of residential care homes for its members and the application of means-tested rules to the provision of financial support
- Advising charity trustees on the potential development of a city-centre cricket ground held upon charitable trusts.

COMMERCIAL DISPUTES

William has handled a variety of commercial work both advising and in litigation, across a wide range of contractual disputes in the Chancery and Queen's Bench Divisions as well as the County Courts, Commercial Court and the Court of Appeal.

William has acted for a range of clients from well-known banks and life assurance companies to large and small business involved in trade, manufacture and retail. He has particular experience of the sale of goods and supply of services, contracts of agency (estate agencies, recruitment agencies and financial consultancies), franchise agreements, seeking and resisting injunctive relief in cases concerning covenants in restraint of trade and misuse of confidential information, contracts of guarantee (enforceability and construction of terms), civil fraud, bailment and conversion, debt recovery and restitutionary remedies.

William has developed an expertise in disputes relating to contracts vitiated by mistake and in claims relating to actionable misdescription of goods, including innocent, negligent or fraudulent misrepresentations at common law and actions under the Misrepresentation Act 1967.

William has been complimented for his ability to work quickly in cases of urgency, seeking interlocutory relief where a client's commercial interests require it, and has considerable experience of seeking and resisting applications for freezing orders.

William has acted in a wide range of partnership disputes, with particular emphasis on the existence and obligations in informal partnership agreements and partnerships at will, the breakdown of joint ventures, dissolution, orders for sale of (and rights to buy) partnership property, secret profits, analysis of partnership accounts, expulsion and retirement, the duties of partners, and taking steps to protect confidential information and preserve partnership assets on an urgent basis.

William has acted in respect of joint ventures in a wide range of commercial spheres, but has developed particular familiarity with farm business partnerships including questions of family land ownership (often over several generations) and agricultural tenancies and subsidies, as well as partnerships of accountancy and IFA practices, medical practices and in the information technology spheres. William also has experience of unfair prejudice petitions in the context 'quasi-partnerships' where small private companies are used as vehicles for joint ventures.

William is also frequently instructed to advise on, and draft, terms in partnership agreements.

PROFESSIONAL LIABILITY

William acts for both claimants and defendants, with particular experience in claims against solicitors, building contractors, valuers, local authorities, surveyors and architects.

William has expertise in claims of negligence relating to conveyancing transactions, defective construction of buildings and the detection of such defects, valuations of real property and businesses, and the drafting and administration of trusts and wills by solicitors. William has recently given a series of seminars on liability of solicitors to potential beneficiaries in the preparation of wills under the principal in White v Jones.

A number of recent cases have involved defective dispositions of land, failures in the creation of trusts, and failures in the administration of funds held upon trust including failures to invest trust monies.

MEDIATION AND ARBITRATION

William is frequently instructed to represent and advise clients at mediation, in a wide range of disputes covering his areas of practice. He is commended particularly for his persuasive and tactically astute opening position statements and speeches, and for his guidance on changing circumstances and arguments, the inclusion of matters of compromise outside the ambit of the proceedings and an adaptability in testing the case of opponents whilst seeking common ground.

William is also involved in questions of determination by experts, international and domestic arbitration, advising on the enforceability and construction of arbitration agreements, as well as the process of arbitration itself and its relationship with any court proceedings (from interim remedies, stays, appointment and replacement of arbitrators, enforcement and appeals).

INTERNATIONAL

Much of William's work involves an international element. He frequently acts for or against parties outside the UK and his work often involves questions of the proper law governing a contract, jurisdiction, and the interpretation and effect of regulations and conventions concerning enforcement of judgments.

This international element spans the entire scope of William's practice, from commercial litigation to private wealth, estates and trusts (such as estates and settlements including property in more than one jurisdiction) which often involve questions of private international law and the conflict of laws.
